

November, 2017

A Child Safety Information Series † Diocese of Colorado Springs

TEN POINTS TO CREATE SAFE ENVIRONMENTS FOR CHILDREN

1. Sexual molestation is about the victim. Many people are affected when a priest abuses a minor, but the individual most impacted is the victim who has suffered a violation of trust that can affect his or her entire life. The abuser, the family of the abused, and the parish community are all affected by this sin and crime, but the primary person of concern must be the victim.
2. No one has the right to have access to children. If people wish to volunteer for the church or school, they must follow diocesan guidelines on background checks, safe environment training, policies and procedures, and codes of conduct. No one, no matter who they are, has an automatic right to be around children or young people who are in the care of the church without proper screening and without following the rules.
3. Common sense is not all that common. It is naive to presume that people automatically know boundaries so organizations and families have to spell them out.
4. Child sexual abuse can be prevented. Awareness that child sexual abuse exists is a start. It is then critical to build safety barriers around children to keep them from harm, such as protective guardians, codes of conduct, background evaluations, policies and procedures, and safety training programs.
5. The residual effects of having been abused can last a lifetime. The sense of violation goes deep into a person's psyche and feelings of anger, shame, hurt and betrayal can build long after the abuse has taken place. Some have even described the feeling as if it has scarred their soul.
6. Feeling heard leads toward healing. Relief from hurt and anger often comes when one feels heard, when one is taken seriously, and a victim/survivor's appropriate sense of rage and indignation are acknowledged. Not being acknowledged contributes to a victim's sense of being re-victimized.
7. You cannot always predict who will be an abuser. Experience shows that most abuse is at the hands of someone who has gained the trust of a victim/survivor and his/her family. Sometimes the nicest person in the world is an abuser, and this niceness enables a false sense of trust to be created between abuser and abused.
8. There are behavioral warning signs of child abusers. Training and education help us recognize grooming techniques that are precursors to abuse. Some abusers isolate a potential victim by giving him or her undue attention or gifts. Some allow young people to participate in activities which their parents would not approve, such as watching pornography, drinking alcohol, and using drugs. It is critical to be wary of age-inappropriate relationships, for example, the adult who is more comfortable with children than fellow adults.
9. People can be taught to identify grooming behavior which are the actions which abusers take to project the image that they are kind, generous, caring people, while their intent is to take selfish advantage of another. An abuser may develop a relationship with the family to increase his credibility. Abusers might show attention to the child by talking to him/her, being friendly, sharing alcohol with a minor and giving the child status by insinuating that the child is their favorite or special person
10. Background checks work. Background checks in churches, schools and other organizations keep predators away from children because they scare off some predators and because they uncover past actions. If an adult has had difficulty with some boundaries that society sets, such as not driving while intoxicated or not disturbing the public peace, he or she may have difficulties with other boundaries, such as not hurting a child. Never forget that offenders lie.

Adapted from <http://www.usccb.org/issues-and-action/child-and-youth-protection/child-abuse-prevention/ten-points-to-create-safe-environments-for-children.cfm>

The Diocese of Colorado Springs
Office of Child and Youth Protection
228 North Cascade Avenue
Colorado Springs, CO 80903
719-636-2345